Welcome to Think Parrots 2016

Dear Visitor,

Here we are again at Kempton Park with an even better event and more exhibitors taking space. Once more we have the country's top speakers presenting our Masterclasses and have added this year, two Mini Masterclasses given by David Woolcock on two of the most common problems people are faced with – screaming and biting.

There is one change in the originally planned Masterclass programme with Tony Pittman, who was going to speak on Blue Macaws, having to step down for personal reasons and we wish him well. My thanks go to Rosemary Low, who has stepped in at short notice with her new presentation on 'The Foraging Parrot – diets from the wild to captivity'. Without question you will be in for a real treat.

To make such an event successful there needs to be support from everyone and again, I would like to thank our Show sponsors, Northern Parrots, our expert speakers and the many exhibitors that all gel together to make this event such a success.

It is important we put on a show that is a pleasure for you to visit, so feedback is very helpful. Don't forget to complete the 'Comments' form included with this guide, for your chance to win a 6 month subscription to Parrots magazine and pop it in the collection box on the Parrots magazine stand 2.

I hope you all have a great day out and go back home with knowledge and goodies to make your parrots' lives that little bit better.

Welcome from the Show's sponsor

Dear Visitor,

Northern Parrots is again delighted to be supporting Think Parrots Show 2016.

We are encouraged to see how this event has developed over the years and how so many people want to give their birds the best life possible.

At Northern Parrots, we supply one of the largest ranges of parrot goods and are constantly adding new items. At this year's Show you will find an even larger range to choose from and I am confident that you will find all the items that you require. Again we will be offering special deals on cages, stands, treats, lighting and much more! So come and see us soon on Stand 1 so you don't miss the best deals.

The Think Parrots Shows have clearly established a valuable event where people can meet, listen and learn in their endeavours to reinforce the very special relationship they have with their birds. We are pleased to be part of this unique event, where we have the opportunity to personally meet many of our customers.

We hope you have a very enjoyable day.

Why Save Parrots?

TRUST

BY STEVE MILPACHER – OPERATIONS DIRECTOR WPT

Significant conservation and welfare issues

The parrots, or psittaciformes, are some of the most ecologically complex creatures in the world. They are the most endangered group of birds on earth, with well over 100 species threatened of nearly 400 species in the wild. They face habitat loss, capture for the wildlife trade and persecution from agriculture and hunting.

Their great popularity as pets, means millions of parrots are found in captivity. These companion parrots face different challenges related to health, behaviour and other welfare issues. A fortunate few enjoy long, rich and fulfilling lives, receiving optimal care from well-informed and compassionate caregivers. Many more, however, are kept in less-than-ideal circumstances due to a lack of understanding of their physical and mental needs.

The World Parrot Trust (WPT), founded in 1989, was created to help confront the issues inherent in the parrot-human interface. WPT has brought together global wildlife conservation and welfare specialists to direct and put into action effective programmes to protect parrots. Our approach is rooted in sound science and decades of first hand experience in the field as well as a deep knowledge of companion parrot husbandry and care.

For wild parrots...

WPT moves quickly to address urgent conservation issues and provide long-term support of projects, using multiple approaches and by teaming up with in-country partners and individuals. In central Africa, for example, WPT is working with many organisations to secure increased protections internationally for Grey and Timneh parrots, two species greatly affected by the trade in wild-caught birds. And in Bolivia the Blue-throated Macaw Project uses diverse methods to increase awareness about the Macaws, boost wild populations and manage captive breeding centres with the aim of future reintroduction of individual birds to the wild.

For companion parrots...

To support and educate companion parrot caregivers, WPT provides information on proper care through comprehensive print-based, multimedia and online resources, reaching hundreds of thousands of enthusiasts each year. WPT also encourages the adoption and re-homing of parrots from sanctuaries, to help alleviate the problem of overcrowding in these rescue facilities.

Since its launch in 1989, the WPT has aided 66 species in 42 countries.

Learn more about how you can help by visiting our stand 20, or by visiting our website at: www.parrot.org. Please help us to help the parrots. ■

11.00-12.00: Common ailments and what to look for

Speaker: Alan K Jones, BVetMed MRCVS

Alan K Jones has had a lifelong interest in birds and qualified as a Veterinary Surgeon in 1970. In 1985, he established his own practice, and has worked ever since with many avian patients. Having retired from general avian veterinary practice in 2013, he is enjoying more time for writing and photography. 'Keeping Parrots – Understanding their care and breeding' was published in 2011, while his autobiography 'I Believe I can fly – my life as a Birdvet' appeared in 2015. Stand 18

1.00-2.00: The foraging parrot – diets from the wild to captivity

Speaker: Rosemary Low

Rosemary has kept parrots for more than 50 years, and is the former curator of birds of Loro Parque, Tenerife, and Palmitos Park, Gran Canaria. With more than 20 books published on parrots, she has written for specialist magazines worldwide, and has had hundreds of articles published. Rosemary has visited 27 countries to observe wild parrots, especially in South America. In recent years she has raised funds and written about bird conservation projects, and has spoken at many symposiums. Stand 15

3.00-4.00: Practical ways to enrich the life of your pet parrot

Speaker: David Woolcock

David is both Curator of Paradise Park in Cornwall and a founding trustee of the World Parrot Trust. His interest in parrots started when he bred African Ring-necked Parakeets from the age of 11. He believes in the enriching benefits of positive reinforcement training, improving the lives of pet parrots, and loves to help owners develop their relationships with their birds through positive interactions. David is an international speaker and has had articles published in various well-known parrot journals. Stand 20

your parrot queries answered

Natural is best

Q My African Grey has recently chewed right through his favourite natural perch, now replaced with a new one. He won't go anywhere near the new one, from the same apple tree as the previous one. Will he ever get used to it?

A Some parrots seem to be neo-phobic. This means it takes them a while to get used to change as well as new situations and/or objects in their environment. Some Greys can carry it to extremes but they usually accept new things if they are introduced in a non-threatening manner. Most parrots can be wary of new objects or situations when they suddenly appear in or around their cages. With a bird that is threatened by items suddenly placed in their cage, it is best to introduce them away from the cage territory in a safe and playful way. An example would be to put the perch flat on a bed or couch with a couple of almond pieces and favourite toys close by. Let the bird see you playing with the perch a bit with a happy look on your face, as this will communicate that the stick is safe. Slowly get him to step on the stick in a playful manner and then let him walk up and down it with you moving it and telling him what a good bird he is. Once he gets used to the new perch away from the cage with your approval, he will be much more likely to accept it in his cage. This is true for toys, other cage accessories, and anything that is new to him, in and around his cage. Sally Blanchard

Prefers own space?

Q My Orange-winged Amazon has always had the freedom of our lounge as her cage is fully open all day. She mainly seems to prefer being inside the cage rather than having the freedom of the room, does this mean she is unhappy with a large open space?

A While some people think that cages are horrible for companion parrots, the truth is usually that they are a very safe and secure place and many parrots are comfortable there. It is much like a child's room where all their "stuff" is. Parrots can easily get into a routine and may need a nudge now and then to change that routine. He is most likely not unhappy with the large open space but is used to it. My advice would be to get a basic T-stand with a food bowl on it and place it close to the door when it is open. Gradually start feeding him treats in the bowl so he has to come out of the cage to get them, and you can even start feeding him his food there. When he gets comfortable on the T-stand, start moving it closer to where you spend time and give him lots of attention and praise for being away from the cage. Interact with him more away from the cage so he wants to be closer to you. I think you will find that it is just a matter of changing some of your habits so that he can change his habits and enjoy a more adventurous life. Sally Blanchard

The National Theft Register supports Microchipping for Parrots

John Hayward, who co-ordinates the National Theft Register (Stand 3) for Exotics, is currently leading a publicity campaign for the need of positive identification of animals, especially those that regularly become lost or stolen. The main species are Parrots, Cockatoos, Macaws and other smaller birds.

Over the years that the Register has existed, many lost, found and stolen animals have been re-united with their owners, generally achieved on account of having some positive means of identification.

The two main systems are bird rings and microchips for all animals. Split and closed rings can be supplied with unique inscriptions to identify the breeder or owner. Birds with rings can be doubly protected with chips as well.

Many valuable birds have been stolen or have escaped and fallen into the wrong hands when lawful ownership needs to be proven. Without such methods as rings or chips this can be impossible.

We have never known of any case where a thief or receiver of stolen parrots has ever tried to remove a microchip. It is so important for the Police when executing search warrants to positively identify the alleged stolen bird.

John makes the point that the majority of dog owners will chip their pets, so why not a bird or other exotic species that can live for decades. In any event, Annex A CITES' animals must have such positive ID for Article 10 Licences when entered into trade.

There are a number of different smaller microchips now available on the market suitable for the majority of species, preferably dealt with by specialist avian vets* at most affordable one-off charges, for the life of the animal.

Once microchipped, the animal is duly registered and ownership is traceable. ■

Come and say hello...

We are grateful to all at Parrots Magazine and 'Think Parrots 2016' for giving us space to promote parrot conservation and welfare.

Please visit the World Parrot Trust stand to say hello and for info, advice, t-shirts, dvds etc.

This year we are focusing on enrichment and training, helping you to create a positive relationship with your pet. There will be parrot-friendly plants for sale, with free seeds to take home and grow, plus lots of ideas and advice to make your own safe toys at home. All these link in with the afternoon talk by the Trust's David Woolcock on 'Practical ways to enrich the life of your pet parrot'.

MARITA'S RECIPE

Ingredients:

- 1 cup oatmeal
- 1/2 cup wholewheat flour
- 1/2 cup dried raisins
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 handfuls fresh dandelion leaves

Dandelion Snack

Preparation:

Chop the dandelion leaves and mix with the other ingredients. Knead well and let it stand for 10 minutes. Should the dough be too dry, add a little water to it and knead it again.

After standing, knead the dough well. Use a teaspoon and make some little cookies on a lined baking tray.

Bake the cookies at 150 degrees C for 15-20 minutes, then let them cool down before being eaten.

If you make too many cookies, freeze what you don't use. ■

LIGHTING FOR BIRDS

The Arcadia Bird Lamp has been developed in order to provide an artificial source of ultraviolet (UV) light, which is essential to captive birds denied exposure to direct sunlight.

ULTRAVIOLET LIGHT INFLUENCES . .

- Vitamin D3 Production
- Vision
- Feeding
- Behaviour
- Breeding

The UV Flood will project usable UV over a wider area and further into a cage than any other bird lamp.
