Sage reaps the benefits of new document management technology from Version One.

Sage has implemented the integrated range of document management and electronic delivery solutions from Version One across its UK and Ireland business and hopes to make significant cost savings over the next year.

Graham Wylie, MD for Sage in the UK, commented, "As Sage has continued to expand, so have the volumes of business documents we produce. Implementing Version One's DbForm, DbFax and DbMail systems means that, with just a click of the mouse, we can automatically, electronically transmit all our invoices, purchase orders, statements, etc. This will save us both time and money and provide a much more professional and efficient service to our customers."

Sage's Internal Systems Director, Steve Leggetter, added: "Version One's products are all tightly integrated into our own Sage software, so they're invisible in use. They are also tightly integrated with each other so they automatically route the documents via the best delivery mechanism: e-mail, fax or print. The system was incredibly easy to set up, and will really boost our productivity."

Graham Wylie concluded, "The business case was easily justified and these systems will help us to continue our growth and improve our customer service."
